Summer Session 1 'May-mester': 5/21/2012 – 6/8/2012

Monday – Friday 11:00AM – 1:40PM

Professor Thomaï Serdari

Description: This class discusses the ideas that have propelled art and design throughout modern history but also the ideas of those who collect, discuss, and exhibit art and design in both the academic and the commercial environment. Tailored to students who have an interest in working within the visual arts industry, this class will encourage the generation of new ideas and help shape them into feasible projects. Within an art historical context that covers from traditional to contemporary, from ancient to modern, from text to visual, the students should view themselves as young entrepreneurs within the art industry and their professor as their business advisor. By the end of the course, we should have a range of projects developed to a degree that would allow their creators to pursue them in real life.

Prerequisites: At least two art history courses, or permission of the instructor.
